NSW POLICE FORCE GLLO / LGBTIQ LIAISON OFFICERS

NSW POLICE FORCE AND THE LGBTIQ COMMUNITIES

The NSW Police Force is committed to ensuring the safety and wellbeing of all members of the community by providing policing services that are available and accessible to all.

Part of this commitment is providing services and programs that are tailored and responsive to the needs of LGBTIQ communities.

The LGBTIQ Liaison Officer Program was established in 1990, to ensure the delivery of a professional, non-discriminatory, and an accessible policing service for the Gay, Lesbian, Bi-sexual, Transgender, Queer, Intersex, and other sexually or gender diverse (LGBTIQ) communities within NSW.

LGBTIQ Liaison Officers, also referred to as GLLOs, are specialist officers who work together with their local LGBTIQ communities, to develop and deliver an effective response that is sensitive to the needs of all sexuality and gender diverse people.

The NSW Police Force is dedicated to supporting LGBTIQ communities and takes pride in its role as a community leader for inclusion and diversity.

The NSW Police Force actively participates in key annual community events such as International Day Against Homophobia, Biphobia and Transphobia, Wear it Purple, Transgender Day of Awareness and the Sydney Gay and Lesbian Mardi Gras.

Further information about the relationship between the NSW Police Force and LGBTIQ communities can be found by searching LGBTIQ on the NSW Police Force website:

GLLO / LGBTIQ LIAISON OFFICERS

There are currently over 300 operational LGBTIQ Liaison Officers across the state and are identifiable through a distinctive rainbow badge worn on an officer's uniform.

LGBTIQ Liaison Officers work to build trust and confidence between the NSW Police Force and LGBTIQ communities.

They can support you by providing discrete, confidential, and non-judgemental advice, assistance or referral for all police related matters.

LGBTIQ Liaison Officers undertake a range of duties including education within Commands, community engagement, monitoring LGBTIQ related events, and assist investigators in LGBTIQ related prejudice motivated crime, domestic violence, and criminal matters.

CONTACTING A GLLO / LGBTIQ LIAISON OFFICER

To contact an LGBTIQ Liaison Officer, call or attend your local police station and ask to speak with one.

If a LGBTIQ Liaison Officer is unavailable, please do not wait to report crime, report it immediately to your local police and a request of follow up support or referral from a LGBTIQ Liaison Officer can be made.
